Instructors

Charlotte Claybrooke – WSDOT Active Transportation Manager and Safe Routes to School Coordinator
James Kisse – Washington Department of Health, Physical Activity Coordinator
Chris Workman – Transportation Improvement Board, Engineering Manager

Target Audience

This course is designed for elected officials, public works transportation professionals, planners and other local jurisdiction staff interested in complete streets.

Training Description

The course will include an overview of complete streets, a review of why they are important, examples of existing policies, information about funding, implementation and other resources. The workshop is intended to help support the inclusion of complete streets projects and policies into long-range transportation plans.

Objectives

- 1) Educate local officials and city/county staff about complete streets concepts.
- 2) Prepare participants to draft and obtain support for complete streets ordinances and projects designed to provide safe access to all users, with consideration for bicyclists, pedestrians, motorists, and public transportation users.
